Sheri Joseph is the author of three books of fiction, most recently the novel Where You Can Find Me. Her earlier books are Stray, a novel, and Bear Me Safely Over, a cycle of stories. She has been awarded a National Endowment for the Arts fellowship and the Grub Street National Book Prize in fiction, as well as multiple residency fellowships including MacDowell and Yaddo; her short fiction has appeared in numerous literary magazines including The Georgia Review, Kenyon Review, and The Virginia Quarterly Review. Recently she was featured in Vanity Fair as one of Atlanta’s “literary sorority” and was chosen by Creative Loafing as one of “20 People to Watch in 2013.” She teaches in the creative writing program at Georgia State University and serves as fiction editor of Five Points literary magazine.